

“I think the United States is Smithian in its bones,” said James Otteson, Wake Forest University professor presidential chair in business ethics and executive director of the BB&T Center of the Study of Capitalism.