

Host Johan Norberg visits the largest library in the world, the Library of Congress where Thomas Jefferson's original copy of Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations is housed. "Jefferson not only read the book; he studied it, referenced it, and recommended it to others," said Norberg. "In a letter to John Norville, he writes, '... if your views of political enquiry go further to the subjects of money and commerce, Smith's Wealth of Nations is the best book to be read.'"