

Half the world still cooks over open flames, often indoors, exposing families to smoke hazards. “Power to the People” host Johan Norberg reveals how that is all changing, increasing energy demands, including this kitchen in the Sahara in Morocco, where food is now prepared on an oven fueled by cooking gas. And there are also refrigerators – major changes vastly increasing the standard of living.